"We are thrilled to have Debbie Forman-Pavan join the Movado Group family. She brings a wealth of experience and a proven track record of success in the luxury and contemporary accessories sector. We are confident that our iconic brands will continue to grow within North America under her leadership," said Efraim Grinberg, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Movado Group. "We are grateful to have worked with Alan for nearly two decades and appreciate his unwavering commitment to excellence and valuable contributions to our Company. Under his leadership, Movado has achieved remarkable milestones and sustained growth. We wish him the very best in retirement."

With decades of experience, Ms. Forman-Pavan's strategic vision and deep understanding of consumer dynamics has helped her successfully optimize distribution channels, forge key partnerships, and grow some of the world's premier brands across North America. Most recently, Ms. Forman-Pavan served as Chief Commercial Officer for the Fashion and Performance Division at Renfro Brands, where she managed multiple hosiery businesses, including the company's Ralph Lauren business. Previously, Ms. Forman-Pavan was an Executive Vice President of the Accessories Division for Global Brands Group, where she spearheaded growth and profit for global lifestyle brands including Michael Kors, Calvin Klein, Kate Spade and more. Ms. Forman-Pavan has also held a variety of leadership roles with notable companies including LVMH and Salvatore Ferragamo.

"I am honored to join the organization and look forward to working with and becoming a part of the team," said Ms. Forman-Pavan. "I have always admired the renowned, iconic global watch brands under the Movado Group portfolio. I am looking forward to building upon the existing platform in place to amplify our growth across North America."
